CONCEPT
This commercial building in Atlanta, Georgia, has been renovated to become a modern co-working environment for independent freelancers, contractors, and solo-entrepreneurs. Inspired by the vivid colors and community of various sea life in the coral reef, the interior was designed to enhance productivity with the latest Steelcase products while stimulating the most creative minds and greatest thinkers with bold colors, natural light, and modern finishes.

RESEARCH
During the research stage of this project, I researched current trends in office design. Reading articles from Steelcase's journal, Turnstone 360°, inspired my design to be an open collaborative office that embodies a sense of community and communication. I was also able to visit the Steelcase website and the Steelcase showroom in Dallas to familiarize myself with their products and the products' functions.

SUSTAINABLE DESIGN
This office was designed with sustainability in mind to meet the client's requirements. Many of the Steelcase products and finishes used contained recycled materials. The carpet that was used by Interface was also made of 100% recycled content. LED lighting was used to ensure energy efficiency and plants were incorporated into each floor to provide a healthy indoor air quality.
