Once upon a time, there was a university campus canopied by towering pines, sturdy oaks and brawny elms. The Lumberjack, Stephen F. Austin State University's mascot, called this beautiful place home.

Thousands of students came from near and far to benefit from superb academic programs, vast outdoor learning centers, innovative research projects, technologically advanced laboratories, exceptional faculty and a colossal library.

In this unique environment, students thrived. They gained knowledge and found friends. Backlit by the peaceful purple sky, they spent their days learning disciplines from accounting to zoology.

Surrounded by supportive faculty and larger-than-life academic opportunities, students felt challenged and motivated to succeed – and succeed they did. Time quickly passed, and soon, the students found themselves ready for graduation.

The graduates were highly sought after in academics and business. Some alumni proceeded to graduate or professional schools, while others began careers in the arts, humanities, science, education and business.

No matter where they went, SFA graduates were held in high regard. They excelled and were leaders.

Today, the Lumberjack mascot still calls SFA home, and so do nearly 13,000 other Lumberjacks. The same high academic standards still prevail. And when students receive their diplomas, they are ready to enter the world and make a difference.
