Face-to-Face

A traditional course in which the instructor and the students are in the same physical setting at the same time for every class session.

Online [anytime]

A traditional online course in which content and activities are delivered asynchronously through a series of structured modules. Students do not attend class on campus and can engage in the course at any time of day.

Livestream

A course in which regularly scheduled class sessions are delivered via Zoom, with real-time interaction between the instructor(s) and student(s). Students do not attend class on campus.

Hybrid

A course delivered as a blend of two modalities, whether face-to-face/online*, face-to-face/livestream*, or online/livestream. Classes meet at regular, scheduled intervals. The faculty determines topics to be covered in each modality.

*For these blends, 50-99% of the traditional face-to-face time must be replaced by instruction online or instruction via Zoom.

HyFlex

A course in which the student decides whether to attend the class face-to-face, via livestream, online, or any combination. Course design accommodates wholly synchronous, wholly asynchronous, and blended participation paths.
