

Chris served as project coordinator. The documents (ranging from 1830s to 1970s) consist of the papers belonging to three attorneys who practiced at the firm. They were acquired from the clearing out of the office of Judge Jack Pierce, the last attorney to practice at the firm. The collection includes letters, correspondence, land deeds, timber deeds, oil and gas leases, debt collection, civil court cases, criminal court cases, estate matters, various legal matters, maps, and approximately five photographs. The bulk of the materials are from the 1910s to the 1960s. The papers were supplemented by family members. Preservation and processing was coordinated through the Center for Regional Heritage Research. The collection is now housed at the East Texas Research Center and was opened for research on October 8, 2009.
